Back to School with Destiny workshop

Alexandria, MN

September 18, 2009

The Back to School Destiny training was not only timely, but was very helpful in implementing the efficiency of the Destiny Program in our school district. The hands-on training enabled me to come back to school with some new tips to make our automation system more efficient. The networking with other school media specialists provided insight on the workings of other libraries: helpful tips for library skills, scheduling woes, and as usual, great new books for our programs. The training was expertly handled by knowledgeable trainers. Because of this training, I am able to fine tune our library's home page, and pass on valuable research tips for our staff and students. And, last but not least, I learned about new tools to try to better serve the staff and students in our school district. I am excited about sharing the mnknows information and resources with our Minnesota History teacher.

Again, hats off to our Destiny trainers. They provide valuable, expert information in a user-friendly atmosphere (and the food was good, too).
